

EXPLOSION UNDER BROADWAY

Five Hundred in Panic at Hotel Continental and Cafe Boulevard.

FIVE MEN ARE SCALDED

A boiler explosion which wrecked the lighting system of the Hotel Continental and the Cafe Boulevard, Broadway and Forty-first street, shortly after 9 o'clock last night threw 500 guests into a state of panic. Five men were badly scalded, one of whom may die. The injured are: Probably fatally. JAMES DUNPHY, 35, a fireman, 225 West 125th street. Removed to the New York Hospital. Seriously. LESLIE ROSENFELD, 19, 132 West Forty-first street, son of Ignatz Rosenfeld, proprietor of the Cafe Boulevard, 20 Polytechnic hospital. Minorly. HARRY LANSAT, engineer, Richmond Hill, L. I. to Polytechnic hospital. JOSEPH ALBERT, bus boy, Cafe Boulevard, 142 West Forty-first street, to New York Hospital. LOUIS KIRKERS, timekeeper, 246 West Thirty-ninth street, taken to Bellevue; will recover.

The accident occurred at a moment when the dining rooms of both the Hotel Continental and the Cafe Boulevard were crowded with guests. The explosion, of the boiler, which was located directly under the dining room of the Continental Hotel, shook the building, crippling the lighting plant and extinguishing every light in both hotels. Immediately there was wild confusion throughout the building, a confusion which got beyond the control of the more level-headed and became a panic. In the dining rooms, where many women were dining with their escorts, the terror was the greatest. A rush for the door followed the explosion and the extinguishing of the lights.

Tables Overturned in Flight.

Chairs and tables were overturned in the flight of the diners to get out. Dishes were broken, from tables and smashed upon the floor. The orchestra in the Continental Hotel started a lively air to allay the fears of the diners, who groped wildly about for the exits. House Detective Van Twine, who was in the lobby of the hotel at the time, ran into the dining room and vainly tried to convince the excited hundred that there was no danger. Though this had little effect, the diners, who were breathing freely until they were out on Forty-first street.

With the first noise of the explosion young Rosenfeld and his father, who were down the stairs into the cellar, as Rosenfeld, who was leading, opened the door a cloud of steam rushed out, badly scalding both Rosenfeld and his father. The father and son were taken to the hospital and Lansat and Kirsner on the floor of the cellar. The two men had been blown from their seats by the force of the explosion.

Miss Alice Robertson, telephone operator in the Hotel Continental, escaped unharmed from the New York and Polytechnic hospitals and notified the guests of the hotel that there was no danger.

Despite this assurance the guests gathered their belongings and fled into the street, where hundreds of persons had gathered. When the ambulances arrived the injured men were placed in them and hurried to the hospitals, where, after an examination, it was said that Dunphy might die.

On the first floor of the Hotel Continental at the time of the explosion Leon Sanders, independent candidate for Justice of the Supreme Court, was instructing 200 watchers. They fled out of the building and assisted the management of the hotel in policing the corridors of the hotel and Cafe Boulevard. After the explosion had subsided the meeting was reopened and held in candle light.

H. S. Duncan, manager of the Hotel Continental, attributed the explosion to a defective tube in the boiler which supplies the hotel and adjoining cafe with heat. The boiler was installed last year.

TWO HURT IN BLAST

Dying Establishment Wrecked—Hospital Windows Broken.

Two of the partners in the Lennie Cleaning and Dyeing Establishment, 215 East Sixty-fourth street, were at their desks at 10:30 last night when an explosion shook the building, hurling them through a plate glass window into the street.

One of the men, Leonard Mack of 207 West 142d street, had his right arm cut off and his left arm removed and suffered internal injuries, as well as scores of cuts on his body and face. The other, Isaac Diamond, of 123 East 121st street, in the Bronx, was badly cut and bruised. A driver for the firm, Elias Millstein of 4031 Third avenue, who was in the doorway when the explosion occurred, was thrown twenty feet and was badly injured.

The noise of the explosion could be heard for ten blocks. Across the street is the Manhattan Eye and Ear Infirmary. More than 100 windows in the hospital were blown out and nurses and doctors had a busy time soothing the nervous patients. The building where the explosion occurred is a two-story brick. Its left wall was demolished, the roof blown off and part of the rear wall was caved in. Immediately after the explosion the building took fire and firemen and police reserves were summoned. The money loss is about $5,000. The fire was put out after an hour, and Deputy Fire Chief Burns said he thought that because in the cellar had caused the explosion. Mack and Diamond, who were taken to the Reception Hospital, said the benzene they kept for cleaning purposes was in a tank under the sidewalk and could not have exploded. They thought the boiler in the engine room had blown out.

BRIDGES END OLD FERRY.

East River Line Discontinued After Seventy Years.

The ferry line from the foot of East Tenth street to Greenpoint avenue, Williamsburg, which has been discontinued by the Interborough Ferry Company. Capt. James Smith, the ferry superintendent, said yesterday that the Queensboro and Williamsburg bridges are now taking so much of the vehicular traffic and subways and elevated lines are so much quicker that it no longer pays to continue the ferry. The company will continue the line from East Twenty-third street to Greenpoint avenue. It has been decided to sell the old ferry boat Florida.

TERCENTENARY DAZZLE.

Parade Route Will Be Illuminated By 65,000 Electric Lights.

Sixty-five thousand electric lights, enough to light Baltimore and Detroit combined, were flashed on last night to mark the tercentenary of the Dutch and English Company officers could inspect this route of the tercentenary parade, which will be held to-day. The lights were strung from Thirty-fourth street to Fifth street, from Third avenue, to Fifty-fifth street, to Columbus Circle. Then there were more from Third avenue, and 110th street, to 125th street, to B. way.

DE LUXE BOOK BAIT BRINGS LETTERS TO WOMAN OF 70 YEARS

Letters at Trial Tell of Mrs. Soder's Terrible Dread of Asylum for Entering Into $30,000 Bargain—Feared to Tell.

HER COUNSEL NOT DECIDED

FREEPORT, L. I., Oct. 27.—Mrs. Florence A. Carman's trip to Ravenock, Pa., to rest up after more than a month in jail and a week of mental and physical strain in court on trial for her life, will not be with the absolute surety that she never again will have to face a jury as the alleged slayer of Mrs. Louise Leavitt.

District Attorney Lewis J. Smith said today after a day in Brooklyn, where Justice Kelly, the Carman trial judge was sitting, that he is inclined to call Mrs. Carman to trial again on the murder indictment still standing against her. He will not consent to quashing the indictment. As the case stands now he sees no other alternative than for Mrs. Carman to insist on another trial.

Mrs. Carman had intended to leave her Freeport home early this morning for a week at the hotel farm owned by Dr. Carman and George M. Levy, one of the defense counsel, but owing to the fact that her husband's automobile was not in shape for the trip they will not go until tomorrow. Besides Dr. Carman and Mr. Levy, Mrs. Ida Powell, her sister, and her daughter, Elizabeth, will accompany her.

Dr. Carman took his wife, who is now out on $25,000 bail, to Brooklyn this afternoon for an automobile trip, returning before dinner. Before he left he talked at length about the trial, insisting that Mrs. Carman is innocent and that she has no vindication and wants another chance for absolute acquittal.

He feels the same way about it himself, he says.

"Mrs. Carman is all cut up about it," said Dr. Carman. "Being in her position, absolutely innocent and knowing it, she could not conceive how any one could fail to believe her innocent, but she does not have a reasonable doubt about her guilt. I don't see why the District Attorney was so anxious to do more than his duty. I don't think that public opinion is behind him. Every one seems to favor Mrs. Carman."

George Levy held a conference to-night with former Surrogate John J. Graham, who conducted the trial, as to the future steps to be taken. There will be no haste in making a decision, Mr. Levy said, because, despite the fact that both he and Mr. Graham are confident another jury would acquit her, they do not want to jeopardize her life again unless it is necessary.

District Attorney Smith has already begun his investigation of the story that most of the jury jurors who heard the testimony had agreed on acquittal before all the evidence was in their hands. He has had one of the jurors on the telephone and with him to talk with him in his office in a day or two.

Mr. Carman took his wife, who is now out on $25,000 bail, to Brooklyn this afternoon for an automobile trip, returning before dinner. Before he left he talked at length about the trial, insisting that Mrs. Carman is innocent and that she has no vindication and wants another chance for absolute acquittal.

He feels the same way about it himself, he says.

"Mrs. Carman is all cut up about it," said Dr. Carman. "Being in her position, absolutely innocent and knowing it, she could not conceive how any one could fail to believe her innocent, but she does not have a reasonable doubt about her guilt. I don't see why the District Attorney was so anxious to do more than his duty. I don't think that public opinion is behind him. Every one seems to favor Mrs. Carman."

George Levy held a conference to-night with former Surrogate John J. Graham, who conducted the trial, as to the future steps to be taken. There will be no haste in making a decision, Mr. Levy said, because, despite the fact that both he and Mr. Graham are confident another jury would acquit her, they do not want to jeopardize her life again unless it is necessary.

District Attorney Smith has already begun his investigation of the story that most of the jury jurors who heard the testimony had agreed on acquittal before all the evidence was in their hands. He has had one of the jurors on the telephone and with him to talk with him in his office in a day or two.

Mr. Carman took his wife, who is now out on $25,000 bail, to Brooklyn this afternoon for an automobile trip, returning before dinner. Before he left he talked at length about the trial, insisting that Mrs. Carman is innocent and that she has no vindication and wants another chance for absolute acquittal.

He feels the same way about it himself, he says.

"Mrs. Carman is all cut up about it," said Dr. Carman. "Being in her position, absolutely innocent and knowing it, she could not conceive how any one could fail to believe her innocent, but she does not have a reasonable doubt about her guilt. I don't see why the District Attorney was so anxious to do more than his duty. I don't think that public opinion is behind him. Every one seems to favor Mrs. Carman."

George Levy held a conference to-night with former Surrogate John J. Graham, who conducted the trial, as to the future steps to be taken. There will be no haste in making a decision, Mr. Levy said, because, despite the fact that both he and Mr. Graham are confident another jury would acquit her, they do not want to jeopardize her life again unless it is necessary.

District Attorney Smith has already begun his investigation of the story that most of the jury jurors who heard the testimony had agreed on acquittal before all the evidence was in their hands. He has had one of the jurors on the telephone and with him to talk with him in his office in a day or two.

Mr. Carman took his wife, who is now out on $25,000 bail, to Brooklyn this afternoon for an automobile trip, returning before dinner. Before he left he talked at length about the trial, insisting that Mrs. Carman is innocent and that she has no vindication and wants another chance for absolute acquittal.

He feels the same way about it himself, he says.

"Mrs. Carman is all cut up about it," said Dr. Carman. "Being in her position, absolutely innocent and knowing it, she could not conceive how any one could fail to believe her innocent, but she does not have a reasonable doubt about her guilt. I don't see why the District Attorney was so anxious to do more than his duty. I don't think that public opinion is behind him. Every one seems to favor Mrs. Carman."

George Levy held a conference to-night with former Surrogate John J. Graham, who conducted the trial, as to the future steps to be taken. There will be no haste in making a decision, Mr. Levy said, because, despite the fact that both he and Mr. Graham are confident another jury would acquit her, they do not want to jeopardize her life again unless it is necessary.

District Attorney Smith has already begun his investigation of the story that most of the jury jurors who heard the testimony had agreed on acquittal before all the evidence was in their hands. He has had one of the jurors on the telephone and with him to talk with him in his office in a day or two.

Mr. Carman took his wife, who is now out on $25,000 bail, to Brooklyn this afternoon for an automobile trip, returning before dinner. Before he left he talked at length about the trial, insisting that Mrs. Carman is innocent and that she has no vindication and wants another chance for absolute acquittal.

He feels the same way about it himself, he says.

"Mrs. Carman is all cut up about it," said Dr. Carman. "Being in her position, absolutely innocent and knowing it, she could not conceive how any one could fail to believe her innocent, but she does not have a reasonable doubt about her guilt. I don't see why the District Attorney was so anxious to do more than his duty. I don't think that public opinion is behind him. Every one seems to favor Mrs. Carman."

George Levy held a conference to-night with former Surrogate John J. Graham, who conducted the trial, as to the future steps to be taken. There will be no haste in making a decision, Mr. Levy said, because, despite the fact that both he and Mr. Graham are confident another jury would acquit her, they do not want to jeopardize her life again unless it is necessary.

District Attorney Smith has already begun his investigation of the story that most of the jury jurors who heard the testimony had agreed on acquittal before all the evidence was in their hands. He has had one of the jurors on the telephone and with him to talk with him in his office in a day or two.

Mr. Carman took his wife, who is now out on $25,000 bail, to Brooklyn this afternoon for an automobile trip, returning before dinner. Before he left he talked at length about the trial, insisting that Mrs. Carman is innocent and that she has no vindication and wants another chance for absolute acquittal.

He feels the same way about it himself, he says.

"Mrs. Carman is all cut up about it," said Dr. Carman. "Being in her position, absolutely innocent and knowing it, she could not conceive how any one could fail to believe her innocent, but she does not have a reasonable doubt about her guilt. I don't see why the District Attorney was so anxious to do more than his duty. I don't think that public opinion is behind him. Every one seems to favor Mrs. Carman."

George Levy held a conference to-night with former Surrogate John J. Graham, who conducted the trial, as to the future steps to be taken. There will be no haste in making a decision, Mr. Levy said, because, despite the fact that both he and Mr. Graham are confident another jury would acquit her, they do not want to jeopardize her life again unless it is necessary.

District Attorney Smith has already begun his investigation of the story that most of the jury jurors who heard the testimony had agreed on acquittal before all the evidence was in their hands. He has had one of the jurors on the telephone and with him to talk with him in his office in a day or two.

Mr. Carman took his wife, who is now out on $25,000 bail, to Brooklyn this afternoon for an automobile trip, returning before dinner. Before he left he talked at length about the trial, insisting that Mrs. Carman is innocent and that she has no vindication and wants another chance for absolute acquittal.

He feels the same way about it himself, he says.

"Mrs. Carman is all cut up about it," said Dr. Carman. "Being in her position, absolutely innocent and knowing it, she could not conceive how any one could fail to believe her innocent, but she does not have a reasonable doubt about her guilt. I don't see why the District Attorney was so anxious to do more than his duty. I don't think that public opinion is behind him. Every one seems to favor Mrs. Carman."

George Levy held a conference to-night with former Surrogate John J. Graham, who conducted the trial, as to the future steps to be taken. There will be no haste in making a decision, Mr. Levy said, because, despite the fact that both he and Mr. Graham are confident another jury would acquit her, they do not want to jeopardize her life again unless it is necessary.

District Attorney Smith has already begun his investigation of the story that most of the jury jurors who heard the testimony had agreed on acquittal before all the evidence was in their hands. He has had one of the jurors on the telephone and with him to talk with him in his office in a day or two.

Mr. Carman took his wife, who is now out on $25,000 bail, to Brooklyn this afternoon for an automobile trip, returning before dinner. Before he left he talked at length about the trial, insisting that Mrs. Carman is innocent and that she has no vindication and wants another chance for absolute acquittal.

He feels the same way about it himself, he says.

"Mrs. Carman is all cut up about it," said Dr. Carman. "Being in her position, absolutely innocent and knowing it, she could not conceive how any one could fail to believe her innocent, but she does not have a reasonable doubt about her guilt. I don't see why the District Attorney was so anxious to do more than his duty. I don't think that public opinion is behind him. Every one seems to favor Mrs. Carman."

George Levy held a conference to-night with former Surrogate John J. Graham, who conducted the trial, as to the future steps to be taken. There will be no haste in making a decision, Mr. Levy said, because, despite the fact that both he and Mr. Graham are confident another jury would acquit her, they do not want to jeopardize her life again unless it is necessary.

District Attorney Smith has already begun his investigation of the story that most of the jury jurors who heard the testimony had agreed on acquittal before all the evidence was in their hands. He has had one of the jurors on the telephone and with him to talk with him in his office in a day or two.

Mr. Carman took his wife, who is now out on $25,000 bail, to Brooklyn this afternoon for an automobile trip, returning before dinner. Before he left he talked at length about the trial, insisting that Mrs. Carman is innocent and that she has no vindication and wants another chance for absolute acquittal.

He feels the same way about it himself, he says.

"Mrs. Carman is all cut up about it," said Dr. Carman. "Being in her position, absolutely innocent and knowing it, she could not conceive how any one could fail to believe her innocent, but she does not have a reasonable doubt about her guilt. I don't see why the District Attorney was so anxious to do more than his duty. I don't think that public opinion is behind him. Every one seems to favor Mrs. Carman."

George Levy held a conference to-night with former Surrogate John J. Graham, who conducted the trial, as to the future steps to be taken. There will be no haste in making a decision, Mr. Levy said, because, despite the fact that both he and Mr. Graham are confident another jury would acquit her, they do not want to jeopardize her life again unless it is necessary.

District Attorney Smith has already begun his investigation of the story that most of the jury jurors who heard the testimony had agreed on acquittal before all the evidence was in their hands. He has had one of the jurors on the telephone and with him to talk with him in his office in a day or two.

Mr. Carman took his wife, who is now out on $25,000 bail, to Brooklyn this afternoon for an automobile trip, returning before dinner. Before he left he talked at length about the trial, insisting that Mrs. Carman is innocent and that she has no vindication and wants another chance for absolute acquittal.

He feels the same way about it himself, he says.

"Mrs. Carman is all cut up about it," said Dr. Carman. "Being in her position, absolutely innocent and knowing it, she could not conceive how any one could fail to believe her innocent, but she does not have a reasonable doubt about her guilt. I don't see why the District Attorney was so anxious to do more than his duty. I don't think that public opinion is behind him. Every one seems to favor Mrs. Carman."

George Levy held a conference to-night with former Surrogate John J. Graham, who conducted the trial, as to the future steps to be taken. There will be no haste in making a decision, Mr. Levy said, because, despite the fact that both he and Mr. Graham are confident another jury would acquit her, they do not want to jeopardize her life again unless it is necessary.

District Attorney Smith has already begun his investigation of the story that most of the jury jurors who heard the testimony had agreed on acquittal before all the evidence was in their hands. He has had one of the jurors on the telephone and with him to talk with him in his office in a day or two.

Mr. Carman took his wife, who is now out on $25,000 bail, to Brooklyn this afternoon for an automobile trip, returning before dinner. Before he left he talked at length about the trial, insisting that Mrs. Carman is innocent and that she has no vindication and wants another chance for absolute acquittal.

He feels the same way about it himself, he says.

"Mrs. Carman is all cut up about it," said Dr. Carman. "Being in her position, absolutely innocent and knowing it, she could not conceive how any one could fail to believe her innocent, but she does not have a reasonable doubt about her guilt. I don't see why the District Attorney was so anxious to do more than his duty. I don't think that public opinion is behind him. Every one seems to favor Mrs. Carman."

George Levy held a conference to-night with former Surrogate John J. Graham, who conducted the trial, as to the future steps to be taken. There will be no haste in making a decision, Mr. Levy said, because, despite the fact that both he and Mr. Graham are confident another jury would acquit her, they do not want to jeopardize her life again unless it is necessary.

District Attorney Smith has already begun his investigation of the story that most of the jury jurors who heard the testimony had agreed on acquittal before all the evidence was in their hands. He has had one of the jurors on the telephone and with him to talk with him in his office in a day or two.

Mr. Carman took his wife, who is now out on $25,000 bail, to Brooklyn this afternoon for an automobile trip, returning before dinner. Before he left he talked at length about the trial, insisting that Mrs. Carman is innocent and that she has no vindication and wants another chance for absolute acquittal.

He feels the same way about it himself, he says.

"Mrs. Carman is all cut up about it," said Dr. Carman. "Being in her position, absolutely innocent and knowing it, she could not conceive how any one could fail to believe her innocent, but she does not have a reasonable doubt about her guilt. I don't see why the District Attorney was so anxious to do more than his duty. I don't think that public opinion is behind him. Every one seems to favor Mrs. Carman."

George Levy held a conference to-night with former Surrogate John J. Graham, who conducted the trial, as to the future steps to be taken. There will be no haste in making a decision, Mr. Levy said, because, despite the fact that both he and Mr. Graham are confident another jury would acquit her, they do not want to jeopardize her life again unless it is necessary.

District Attorney Smith has already begun his investigation of the story that most of the jury jurors who heard the testimony had agreed on acquittal before all the evidence was in their hands. He has had one of the jurors on the telephone and with him to talk with him in his office in a day or two.

Mr. Carman took his wife, who is now out on $25,000 bail, to Brooklyn this afternoon for an automobile trip, returning before dinner. Before he left he talked at length about the trial, insisting that Mrs. Carman is innocent and that she has no vindication and wants another chance for absolute acquittal.

He feels the same way about it himself, he says.

"Mrs. Carman is all cut up about it," said Dr. Carman. "Being in her position, absolutely innocent and knowing it, she could not conceive how any one could fail to believe her innocent, but she does not have a reasonable doubt about her guilt. I don't see why the District Attorney was so anxious to do more than his duty. I don't think that public opinion is behind him. Every one seems to favor Mrs. Carman."

George Levy held a conference to-night with former Surrogate John J. Graham, who conducted the trial, as to the future steps to be taken. There will be no haste in making a decision, Mr. Levy said, because, despite the fact that both he and Mr. Graham are confident another jury would acquit her, they do not want to jeopardize her life again unless it is necessary.

District Attorney Smith has already begun his investigation of the story that most of the jury jurors who heard the testimony had agreed on acquittal before all the evidence was in their hands. He has had one of the jurors on the telephone and with him to talk with him in his office in a day or two.

Mr. Carman took his wife, who is now out on $25,000 bail, to Brooklyn this afternoon for an automobile trip, returning before dinner. Before he left he talked at length about the trial, insisting that Mrs. Carman is innocent and that she has no vindication and wants another chance for absolute acquittal.

He feels the same way about it himself, he says.

"Mrs. Carman is all cut up about it," said Dr. Carman. "Being in her position, absolutely innocent and knowing it, she could not conceive how any one could fail to believe her innocent, but she does not have a reasonable doubt about her guilt. I don't see why the District Attorney was so anxious to do more than his duty. I don't think that public opinion is behind him. Every one seems to favor Mrs. Carman."

George Levy held a conference to-night with former Surrogate John J. Graham, who conducted the trial, as to the future steps to be taken. There will be no haste in making a decision, Mr. Levy said, because, despite the fact that both he and Mr. Graham are confident another jury would acquit her, they do not want to jeopardize her life again unless it is necessary.

District Attorney Smith has already begun his investigation of the story that most of the jury jurors who heard the testimony had agreed on acquittal before all the evidence was in their hands. He has had one of the jurors on the telephone and with him to talk with him in his office in a day or two.

Mr. Carman took his wife, who is now out on $25,000 bail, to Brooklyn this afternoon for an automobile trip, returning before dinner. Before he left he talked at length about the trial, insisting that Mrs. Carman is innocent and that she has no vindication and wants another chance for absolute acquittal.

He feels the same way about it himself, he says.

"Mrs. Carman is all cut up about it," said Dr. Carman. "Being in her position, absolutely innocent and knowing it, she could not conceive how any one could fail to believe her innocent, but she does not have a reasonable doubt about her guilt. I don't see why the District Attorney was so anxious to do more than his duty. I don't think that public opinion is behind him. Every one seems to favor Mrs. Carman."

George Levy held a conference to-night with former Surrogate John J. Graham, who conducted the trial, as to the future steps to be taken. There will be no haste in making a decision, Mr. Levy said, because, despite the fact that both he and Mr. Graham are confident another jury would acquit her, they do not want to jeopardize her life again unless it is necessary.

District Attorney Smith has already begun his investigation of the story that most of the jury jurors who heard the testimony had agreed on acquittal before all the evidence was in their hands. He has had one of the jurors on the telephone and with him to talk with him in his office in a day or two.

Mr. Carman took his wife, who is now out on $25,000 bail, to Brooklyn this afternoon for an automobile trip, returning before dinner. Before he left he talked at length about the trial, insisting that Mrs. Carman is innocent and that she has no vindication and wants another chance for absolute acquittal.

He feels the same way about it himself, he says.

Counties on Dread of Asylum.

"Her daughter was there when I arrived and, although the old lady was quite sick, she saw me and had her daughter leave us alone, telling the daughter that I was her father's friend and that I had come to see her. In the course of our conversation she let slip what I know more than clinches the contract for the balance of the $18,000, and that she is afraid of her daughter's trial. It is said that she will be put in an asylum, as unable to handle her own affairs."

"That is an absolute fact and is what has made the old lady sick more than anything else."

In another letter Glenn Farmer accuses his father of too great a generosity in letting two sets of books go for $700. Again he mentions that he and Col. Hartley have done $18,000 worth of business that summer, and that they expect to close a $25,000 deal within ten days.

The accused for James J. Farmer and the other defendants asked Judge Rufus Foster yesterday to quash the indictments for lack of evidence showing conspiracy to defraud. It was the defense's first day.

No jury was let go and the lawyers argued all morning. Judge Foster finally denied the motions with respect to all the defendants except William Warfield and George Fischer; as to them, Judge Foster said he would take the motions under advisement and announce a decision this morning, when the trial is resumed.

Mr. Carman took his wife, who is now out on $25,000 bail, to Brooklyn this afternoon for an automobile trip, returning before dinner. Before he left he talked at length about the trial, insisting that Mrs. Carman is innocent and that she has no vindication and wants another chance for absolute acquittal.

He feels the same way about it himself, he says.

"Mrs. Carman is all cut up about it," said Dr. Carman. "Being in her position, absolutely innocent and knowing it, she could not conceive how any one could fail to believe her innocent, but she does not have a reasonable doubt about her guilt. I don't see why the District Attorney was so anxious to do more than his duty. I don't think that public opinion is behind him. Every one seems to favor Mrs. Carman."

George Levy held a conference to-night with former Surrogate John J. Graham, who conducted the trial, as to the future steps to be taken. There will be no haste in making a decision, Mr. Levy said, because, despite the fact that both he and Mr. Graham are confident another jury would acquit her, they do not want to jeopardize her life again unless it is necessary.

District Attorney Smith has already begun his investigation of the story that most of the jury jurors who heard the testimony had agreed on acquittal before all the evidence was in their hands. He has had one of the jurors on the telephone and with him to talk with him in his office in a day or two.

Mr. Carman took his wife, who is now out on $25,000 bail, to Brooklyn this afternoon for an automobile trip, returning before dinner. Before he left he talked at length about the trial, insisting that Mrs. Carman is innocent and that she has no vindication and wants another chance for absolute acquittal.

He feels the same way about it himself, he says.

"Mrs. Carman is all cut up about it," said Dr. Carman. "Being in her position, absolutely innocent and knowing it, she could not conceive how any one could fail to believe her innocent, but she does not have a reasonable doubt about her guilt. I don't see why the District Attorney was so anxious to do more than his duty. I don't think that public opinion is behind him. Every one seems to favor Mrs. Carman."

George Levy held a conference to-night with former Surrogate John J. Graham, who conducted the trial, as to the future steps to be taken. There will be no haste in making a decision, Mr. Levy said, because, despite the fact that both he and Mr. Graham are confident another jury would acquit her, they do not want to jeopardize her life again unless it is necessary.

District Attorney Smith has already begun his investigation of the story that most of the jury jurors who heard the testimony had agreed on acquittal before all the evidence was in their hands. He has had one of the jurors on the telephone and with him to talk with him in his office in a day or two.

Mr. Carman took his wife, who is now out on $25,000 bail, to Brooklyn this afternoon for an automobile trip, returning before dinner. Before he left he talked at length about the trial, insisting that Mrs. Carman is innocent and that she has no vindication and wants another chance for absolute acquittal.

He feels the same way about it himself, he says.

"Mrs. Carman is all cut up about it," said Dr. Carman. "Being in her position, absolutely innocent and knowing it, she could not conceive how any one could fail to believe her innocent, but she does not have a reasonable doubt about her guilt. I don't see why the District Attorney was so anxious to do more than his duty. I don't think that public opinion is behind him. Every one seems to favor Mrs. Carman."

George Levy held a conference to-night with former Surrogate John J. Graham, who conducted the trial, as to the future steps to be taken. There will be no haste in making a decision, Mr. Levy said, because, despite the fact that both he and Mr. Graham are confident another jury would acquit her, they do not want to jeopardize her life again unless it is necessary.

District Attorney Smith has already begun his investigation of the story that most of the jury jurors who heard the testimony had agreed on acquittal before all the evidence was in their hands. He has had one of the jurors on the telephone and with him to talk with him in his office in a day or two.

Mr. Carman took his wife, who is now out on $25,000 bail, to Brooklyn this afternoon for an automobile trip, returning before dinner. Before he left he talked at length about the trial, insisting that Mrs. Carman is innocent and that she has no vindication and wants another chance for absolute acquittal.

He feels the same way about it himself, he says.

"Mrs. Carman is all cut up about it," said Dr. Carman. "Being in her position, absolutely innocent and knowing it, she could not conceive how any one could fail to believe her innocent, but she does not have a reasonable doubt about her guilt. I don't see why the District Attorney was so anxious to do more than his duty. I don't think that public opinion is behind him. Every one seems to favor Mrs. Carman."

George Levy held a conference to-night with former Surrogate John J. Graham, who conducted the trial, as to the future steps to be taken. There will be no haste in making a decision, Mr. Levy said, because, despite the fact that both he and Mr. Graham are confident another jury would acquit her, they do not want to jeopardize her life again unless it is necessary.